Talent Summary

Mr Sample scored lower on the Reasoning scale. He works best in jobs with clearly defined goals that require little deviation from the routine. Training programs designed for those with greater cognitive ability may be overly challenging and frustrating for him.

Mr Sample is interested primarily in the Technical, Financial and Mechanical themes. He enjoys pursuing intellectual activities such as research, analysis and scientific investigation, and he favours a detailed, analytical approach to assessing and categorising information. He also enjoys being outdoors and working with tools.

Mr Sample generally recognises the importance of rules and regulations and he heeds them to a reasonable degree. He is comfortable arguing for his ideas, but will accept other options if they prove to be better. He devotes some effort to fostering good relations across departments and he keeps up with issues of common concern.

Mr Sample can be capable of working at a fast pace under routine conditions. He is usually enthusiastic about risk, change and unexpected challenges, unless he identifies reasons to be sceptical. He prefers to adopt supportive roles, as opposed to pursuing leadership roles.

Additionally, his Resilience score indicates that he usually learns from his mistakes. He likely relies on a limited number of information sources when weighing options for key decisions. John is likely to take inventory of the risks before making decisions. Mr Sample may encounter significant issues if his work requires high degrees of self-direction and self-reliance.
